HARVARD IN FINISHED FORM

Crimson Varsity Crews Far Advanced Over Yale-Smoot and Speedy-Coach Nickalls Has Much Work to Do at Gales Ferry Rounding Out the Blue.

Now that the rival crews of Harvard and Yale are in their quarters on the banks of the Thames, when the finking touches are to be put question the finking touches are to be put question that have been made from seeing the crews close at hand on the same body of water distinctly favor Harvard.

The task of string up the Yale and Harvard crews has been made easier this year because of the coincidence that has sent the crews out from both camps for their seeining rows together. This is the heavy work of the day from which a distinct was almost the same minute and covered the course under water and tide conditions that were almost identical. The fact that the rows were taken set the critics at work and comparisons between the first and second eights in both universities were soon made. Whatever may be done by Coach Guy Nickalls of Yale the next two weeks in rounding the Eli eights into form and power, it is clear that at the present time both Harvard varsity crews are much farther advanced than the Yale nor the Harvard shape of regata day. While it is true that the rows were the course at top speed, there is plenty of ground for a comparison of the two sets of crews who will meet as varsity organizations; if not of the freshman crews.

Harvard Shows Form.

Of the first Harvard eight it can be said that it has reached the stage of racing starts. It has come to Red Top as an almost finished rowing machine, its stroke already keyed up to 32 and 33 to the minute for its time tests of four miles, and the elimination of a few individual body and blade and will use American oars. This and then from this finished.

The Yale eight is far from this finished condition. It is yet adapting the individual bout to the gist in the two which is all the comparisons between the first and second crews. SPECULATION ABOUT CIRCUS. Leonard O. Smith, Frank H. Pullen and Prof. J. Herbert George have ar-ranged with Supt. E. J. Graham for Where it is Going and How Long Staying Here.

Since the coming of the Barnum Bailey circus was announced there has been much speculation as to where the big show would pitch its tents and at least three places have been suggestings. One of these was the fairgrounds, Mitchell. It adjoins the power plant of Mitchell.

Circuses frequently make sudden changes when they actually come to pitch their tents, but Secretary Charles D. Greenman of the New London Control of don County Agricultural society said on Thursday that they have signed a contracted to use the fair grounds. The fact that city water could be secured there was one thing that weighed strongly in favor of this location in the opinion of the advance agent who signed the contract some time

W. Lillibridge said on Thursday that they had had no communication with the circus people about the bridge.

Early in the week it was rumored that the circus would make a three-day stop here. Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, but circus employes who were here with the advertising car on Wednesday said this was all a myth as the show would be in Springfield on Monday and would come from there to this city during Monday night and early Tuesday morning. Conditions Surrounding His Employ-An interesting two-column article appears in the West Coast Leader, published at Lima, Peru, upon The Beachcomber, by Luther K. Zabriskie of this city, vice consul general to that country.

It deals entertainingly with the sailors of a half century ago and today, showing the marked contrast in the manner and methods used in obtaining crews. It concludes as follows:

New statutes are being enacted from time to time by the United States contime to time by the United States congress, and by other law-making bodies, to ameliorate the condition of the merchant mariner, and his status in the eyes of the law at the present is incomparably superior to what it was but 50 years ago. Yet the natural makeup of such men remains but little changed and it is certain that the sallor would not be contented did he not meet with a generous share of discomforts and a generous share of discomforts and hardships, both on sea and on land, and were he not able to appear before his country's consul or minister abroad to complain against the harsh treat-ment of the captain and mates, and the poor food and accommodations aboard ship, as well as against the numerous and varied misfortunes that constantly beset the poor, despised beachcomber. Shore Line Electric Buys Lot.
